

Travel

INSIDE

WILDFLOWER REPORT: Forecasting bluebonnets' arrival 4K
FAST BREAK: Austin cruises take you up close to the bats 5K
BEST FARES: Bargains on car rentals 2K
FAMILY TRAVEL FIVE: See creatures in their habitats 2K

The Dallas Morning News

Section K

Sunday, February 19, 2012

dallasnews.com

INTERNATIONAL

Set a course for adventure on Fiji's carefree Qalito Island

Snorkel, feast or sleep at resorts

By ANNE Z. COOKE
and STEVE HAGGERTY
McClatchy Tribune

QALITO ISLAND, Fiji — We were dozing on the sand at the edge of the bluest lagoon I had ever seen when suddenly I remembered the snorkel trip. We grabbed our masks and rushed to the dive shack, and caught the skiff as it was pulling out for the ride to the far side of the lagoon.

"You can't go home until you've seen the Malolo Barrier Reef," said Kima Tagitagivalu, dive guide at Castaway, a family-friendly resort on Fiji's northwest coast. He checked off our names and handed us our swim fins. "A few years ago the district chief, Ratu Seva Vatunitu, made it taboo for fishing and collecting. The people — even the fishermen — respect that decision, and the fish have come back."

Being there, in the Mamanuca Archipelago, was kismet.

If a last-minute schedule change had not delayed our flight back to Los Angeles, we would never have washed up on Castaway at all. But as often happens here in the carefree South Pacific, changes can be lucky. We could have booked an airport hotel in Nadi, on Viti Levu, the main island. Or found a room at one of the Coral Coast's tourist hotels. Instead, we emailed a friend at home, an indefatigable Fiji booster, for advice.

"Go to Castaway on the ferry route, about 14 miles offshore," she answered. "Lots of sun, a gorgeous beach, starry nights. Great food and secluded. An ideal place to relax and catch up before heading home. Leave by mid-afternoon, and you'll be back at the airport with time to spare."

With mask and fins in hand, we grabbed a seat and the skiff headed for deep wa-

Steve Haggerty/McClatchy Tribune

See EXPERIENCE Page 3K

Days are sunny in the poster-perfect Mamanucas.

Experience Fiji culture on Qalito Island

Continued from Page K

ter, speeding up until the prow bounced over the waves. I had just gotten a good grip on the gunwales when the boat slowed over the reef. Peering down through the glass-clear water, Tagitavivalu found a sandy patch and dropped the anchor. He checked his watch. "We've got an hour before the tide turns," he said, counting heads as we splashed off the stern ladder.

Turning over, I looked down, and said (into my snorkel), "Wow!" The Malolo Barrier Reef, 75 feet high over the ocean floor, was more fantastic than any animated film. Below me, thousands of hard and soft corals of every shape and color crowded together, swaying gently with the tide. Here was a ribbon of pinks, blood-red and soft purple; there a swirl of electric green, custard yellow branches and chocolate brown leaves. For an hour we floated to and fro, enchanted, until Tagitavivalu touched my shoulder and broke the spell. With the tide turning and the waves breaking, we hurriedly swam back to the boat.

Castaway is hard to forget, but truth to tell, it's just one of many resorts in the Mamanuca Group, each with its own style. If you visit here, they're really the only lodging option. The lagoons are a perfect 10 and so is the sand, burnished over millennia to tiny golden specks. But only at a resort will you find shade, fresh water, food and, dare I say it, souvenirs. Even native villages are few and far between, and the smallest islands — like the rocky islet where actor Tom Hanks filmed Castaway — are uninhabited.

Take Tokoriki resort, on hilly Tokoriki Island. A storied retreat favored by couples, Tokoriki's deep well is what fills the water tanks for cooking, washing, topping up the infinity swimming pool, watering the garden and supplying the bathrooms in the resort's 34 luxurious thatched *bure*s (cottages). Waiters serve chef-prepared cuisine in the airy dining room, and guides organize snorkel trips from the lounge. As the sun dips toward the western horizon, guests enjoy the spectacle from deck chairs beside the pool. For us, it was paradise.

Even better were the res-

Native pineapples grow at Viti Levu, Fiji's main island.

sort's half-dozen resident elders, experts in Fijian lore and traditions. If you want to know the back story and why, ask them about village life, or join in as they pass a bowl of kava, strum a guitar and reminisce. The weekly Lovo Feast was also the real deal. As the guests gathered to watch, the kitchen staff shoved hot rocks into an earthen pit. These were layered with banana and palm leaves, topped with bundles of securely wrapped chicken, pork, taro and yams, and smothered in dirt. By twilight, dinner was ready.

"The lovo is more than a meal," said Penkiani Sale, on hand to supervise. "A family feast like this, still held in the villages, brings all the cousins and aunts together and reminds us of our common heritage."

The Mamanucas are poster-perfect, but the main island, Viti Levu, is the cultural and commercial heart of Fiji. Here we checked into the Outrigger on the Lagoon Hotel, on the Coral Coast, our base for exploring. Told that Fijian choirs excel and eager to hear them, we decided to attend a Sunday service at a tiny Methodist church. The 12-person choir, mostly elderly, looked tired and wan. When they sang the hymns, each from memory, a cappella, in harmony, and with perfect pitch, they raised the rafters. As the melody soared over the congregation and out the open windows, people in the lane stopped to listen.

The jet-boat ride on the Sigatoka River was a canned affair for tourists, but we signed up anyway. Scenic and fun, it turned memorable when the boat stopped for a tour of Tubaurata, a traditional hill village. Welcomed by Kini, the village's official greeter, we strolled through the community followed by a parade of chattering kids, then headed for the Community Center. Here the entire population of the village — 45 people — sat cross-legged on the floor awaiting our arrival. The ensuing kava ceremony, with coconut shell cups and ritual clapping, ended and was followed by a lunch served on palm fronds.

The iconic South Seas beach awaits at Castaway Resort on Qalito Island, Fiji.

As the women cleared away the plates, we stood up to leave. But things were just heating up. The men began to sing, and soon one man, then two men and then 10 more stood up and asked the ladies to dance. Soon everyone was up, arms clatching waists, doing the Fijian two-step. Yes, these tours are planned and the villages earn money for hosting guests. But when Fijians welcome you, believe me, it's genuine.

Typically Fijian, the Outrigger is set among lush gardens, with ferns, flowers and shade trees. Geared toward families, the layout includes a huge swimming pool, large dining room and a staff of soft-spoken and ever-smiling nannies, waiters, busboys and maids. The Outrigger is on the shore, as advertised, but this particular lagoon is so large and flat that even at high tide, the water is too shallow even for dipping. The lovely view from the bungalows compensates.

We shopped in town, tasted odd fruits in the open-air market, signed up for a massage in the Outrigger's hilltop spa and dined by the pool. The Outrigger's lovo feast, enough to serve a small army, included traditional dishes prepared in the kitchen and served buffet style in the dining room. Even the troupe of Fijian fire walkers, who put on a ceremonial performance in the outdoor amphitheater, was impressive. I snuck up front afterward to see if the rocks really were hot and earned a blister for my trouble.

Most of Fiji went unseen, including visits to some of the country's other islands, comely shapes on the near horizon. They're on our list for next time. Like the Pied Piper, they, too, beckon castaways to their shores.

When you go

Baby-sitting and nannies: Fijians like children. As a result, most resorts have experienced nannies on staff and offer free or affordable rates ($2 to $5) per hour for baby and toddler care. For children 5 and older, kids' clubs and guided camp activities are generally free.

Tours and trips: Outfitters and guided tours are a big business. Ask at the hotel concierge for suggestions and recommendations. Most include hotel pickup and delivery. Car rentals are also available; driving is easy (if you can manage left-side drive). Taxis are numerous and drivers are helpful; settle on the destination and price in advance.

Resorts & contacts:
■ Castaway Resort, on Qalito Island west of Nadi: castaway.fiji.com
■ Tokoriki Island Resort, north Mamanuca Group: tokoriki.com
■ Outrigger on the Lagoon, Coral Coast, on Viti Levu: outrigger.fiji.com
■ Fiji Tourist Office: tourism.fiji.com

Getting there: Air Pacific flies 10 hours nonstop from Los Angeles to Nadi. The plane crosses the international date line, so the calendar date on arrival is one day later. The return flight gains a day, arriving the day it left. Qantas and American also fly from Honolulu, with one stop.

Guidebooks:
■ Frommer's South Pacific by Bill Goodwin is abbreviated but informative.
■ Moon Fiji Guide by David Stanley (Avalon Press) is a keeper to take with you. Packed with background reading, maps, tips, lodging reviews and cultural history.
■ Lonely Planet Fiji Guide has color photos and more emphasis on budget travel. Compare with the Moon Guide for your preferred style and content.

A traditional Fijian thatched bure in Nalesutale Village in upcountry Viti Levu.

The staff sings a welcome song as visitors arrive at Castaway Resort on Qalito Island.

SAVE UP TO $100's DURING THE

AAA TRAVEL WINTER SALE

Receive exclusive offers and Member Benefits during our Winter Travel Sale on cruises, guided vacations and more!

Special Offers May Include:

- SAVE BIG with limited-time offers such as:
- Up to $1,000 per stateroom onboard credit
 - Up to $615 per person savings
 - And more!
- AAA members may also receive:
- Additional onboard credits and savings
 - Complimentary specialty dining
 - Free photos
 - And more!

HURRY! OFFERS ARE ONLY VALID WHEN YOU BOOK BY FEBRUARY 29, 2012!
CONTACT YOUR AAA TRAVEL AGENT FOR MORE INFORMATION
CALL: 877.510.8698
VISIT: Your local AAA branch

Offers valid only on specific products. Offer restrictions may apply. AAA members must make travel arrangements through AAA. Some offers require Member Benefits and cannot be combined for certain services. AAA Travel, LLC, 400 10th St., St. Louis, MO 63102. © 2012 AAA. All rights reserved. Copyright © 2012 AAA Travel, LLC. All Rights Reserved.