

HOME LIFE

Tribune News Service | Strolling before breakfast on popular Muri Beach on Rarotonga, Cook Islands.

Cook Islands still on the back burner, and better for it

By Anne Z. Cooke

Sunday May 21, 2017 12:01 AM

AVARUA, Rarotonga, Cook Islands - It was a quiet afternoon years ago on Rarotonga, in the Cook Islands, when Lydia Nga got the news.

TODAY'S SPONSOR:

Overnight her homeland, 15 Polynesian islands west of Tahiti, a paradise smaller than Detroit, had grown exponentially, reborn as a 690,000 square-mile nation.

But it wasn't the islands that grew. In 1982, the Third United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea ruled that coastal nations had jurisdiction over an "exclusive economic zone," defined as a 200-mile stretch of ocean measured from the shoreline. Most countries welcomed the idea. But for a tiny nation like the Cooks, population 15,000, it was a Cinderella promise.

Fast-forward 35 years to last August and our first visit to Rarotonga, the main island, lured by the thought of shimmering blue lagoons, gentle breezes, hometown smiles and fewer tourist visits per year than Florida's Disney World gets in two days.

"And how about that economic zone, the one the guidebook described?" asked my husband. Had success spoiled Rarotonga's Polynesian charms?

Not really, according to my friend Kathy, who stays up on these things.

"The last time we looked, the Cooks were like Hawaii in the 1960s, 50 years behind everybody else," she said. (I knew what she was thinking: If it doesn't have a spa, it isn't luxury.) "Ask around, see what people say and let me know," she added.

SEARCH READINGEAGLE.COM

QUICK LINKS

Do you think Trump administration should extradite and prosecute Julian Assange for publishing leaked US secrets?

Yes

No

I have no opinion

NEXT

MOST POPULAR

As our overnight flight from Los Angeles descended over a clutch of green volcanic peaks, my first view of the lagoon, its sandy shoreline, scattered roofs and rows of palms was reassuring. I figured we'd greet the dawn with a stroll along the beach, cool off in the lagoon, maybe even snorkel near the outer reef, where the coral clumps into mounds.

Learning experience

But Nga, my email contact in the tourist office, now known affectionately as Auntie Lydia, had a request. So before bolting for the lagoon, we paid a visit to Ocean Specialist Kevin Iro to hear about the Marae Moana Marine Park conservation project, and to learn why an in-depth survey of every fold and ripple within the Cook's 690,000 square miles is long overdue.

"Marae Moana means ocean domaine," said Iro, an athletic figure in shorts, ushering us and a half-dozen high school kids into a cramped lecture room with rows of desks, its only decor a large TV screen for presentations and a half-dozen back-lit photos of tropical fish and coral.

"The ocean domaine is a mind-set, an idea," he said, putting a chart up on the screen. "It's a shift in the way we see ourselves."

Not as separate islands, he explained, but as a single marine nation. And as the owner of vast, still untapped resources, the government needed to appoint a task force to head the project.

It was also time for a just-caught, grilled fish sandwich at one of Rarotonga's many ocean-side cafes, where picnic-table seating guarantees conversation. And so began our education.

If our tablemates happened to be islanders on a lunch break, they described the Cooks' historic connection with New Zealand, where almost everyone has relatives and yearly visits are the norm. When it's time for college, ambitious students generally go to New Zealand or Australia.

At the Moorings Cafe we learned that New Zealand's Maoris originally came from Rarotonga. Facing a fight with a rival clan, they loaded up their ocean-going canoes and pushed off for parts unknown. And raw sea slugs? They are a favorite snack.

At Charlie's Cafe, I was thrilled to be sitting with people speaking Cook Island Maori, one of the few Polynesian languages still in common use. A required subject in school, it lives on despite colonial rule, a minor role in World War II, tourism and even cellphones.

Taking to bikes

Curious about the rest of Rarotonga, we decided to rent mountain bikes to explore the 20-mile-long circle-island road, "a good way to get your bearings," according to my guidebook. We could have raced but it was much more fun to poke along, stop at vista points, look for craft shops and wave at friendly motorcycle riders.

It was so energizing, in fact, that we joined a second guided ride with Dave and Tami Furnell, owners of Storytellers Eco Cycle Tours, a local outfitter. With rain threatening and 11 of us geared up and ready, we headed for the inland road, the historic, 1000-year-old "ara metua," a grassy, gravelly track built at the base of the volcanoes.

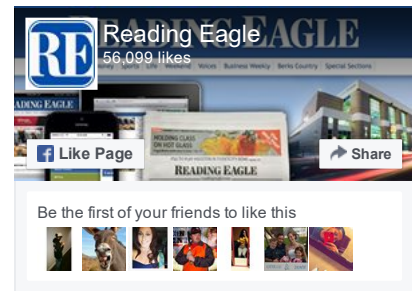

Following Tami among the farm fields, we discovered why restaurant food was so fresh. Away from the coast it was all produce: taro (the edible leaf variety), salad greens and tomatoes, pumpkins and red peppers, onions and bananas, and orchards growing limes, oranges, papaya, star fruit and noni.

Stopping beside the nonis, prized as a health tonic and mosquito repellent, Tami pulled off some soft, smelly fruit, broke them into pieces and to a chorus of "yuck, icky, sticky" and gales of laughter, dared us to rub them over our necks, arms and legs.

Since no visit would be complete without a couple of days on neighboring Aitutaki, world-famous for its lagoon, we flew over, checked into an over-water cabin at the Aitutaki Lagoon Resort and booked a lagoon cruise with Tere, owner of Te King Lagoon Cruises.

Piling into Tere's 12-passenger boat we sped south across the lagoon, rounding the islets, searching for coral gardens and stopping to snorkel. And after you've spent a morning in the heart of one of these shimmering turquoise aquariums - lakes within a coral reef - you can't help but marvel.

'Been there, loved it'

Purchase Daily Photos

Protected from wind and waves but continuously refreshed by the ocean spill-over, a lagoon's unique ecosystem nurtures birds, fish, crabs, clams, mollusks, coral and every other marine organism including people.

And while we gazed around us, literally in awe, Tere peppered us with Maori legends, celebrity anecdotes and marine biology. After a stop at One Foot Island, where "been there, loved it," passport stamps are issued - and a grilled chicken picnic, we headed back.

On our last evening, we squeezed in one of the twice-a-month dinners served at the Plantation House, the colonial home of former restaurant owner Louis Enoka. Dinner here, prepared by Chef Minar Henderson for 20 to 26 guests and served twice a month only, offers not just a blend of island-grown ingredients but an evening with islanders for whom cultural traditions and 21st-century science go hand-in-hand.

ADJUST FONT SIZE: A A A

---

Other Stories

On Wisconsin's new Frank Lloyd Wright Trail

Nine sites created by the famed architect are available for tourists.

Travels with Charlie: Andrew Wyeth stamps mark centennial of artist's birth

This years marks the 100th birthday anniversary of the artist whose work was inspirational and enigmatic.

Snapshot: Ordering beignets the way to go at new Orleans cafe

The cafe has been in the French market in some form since 1862.

Welcome guest! | subscribe | log in

---

Comments (0)

By leaving a comment you agree to our

commenting policy

Be the first to comment.
You must log in before you can post comments.

Want to know the big stories of the day?

Sign up for Reading Eagle Top Stories e-newsletter. A daily email will include links to the day's top stories in News, Life, Sports and more.

Editorial

News
Money
Sports
Berks GameDay
Life
Voices
Business Weekly
Berks Country
Weekend
Opinion
Obituaries

Content

Columnists
Blogs
eEdition
Archives
TVTimes
Special Sections
Events

Marketplace

Classified Directory
Find A Job
Find A Car
Find A Rental
Find A Home
Find A Date
Find Merchandise
Celebrations
Reader Rewards
Reproductions
Big Deal$

Services

Contact Us
Subscriber Services
FAQs
Advertise With Us
Lottery
Feedback
User Submissions
Newspaper in Education
Internet Directory

Follow Us

 Facebook
 Twitter
 Pinterest
 Tumblr
 Google+
 Mobile
 RSS
 Alerts

READING EAGLE COMPANY

RE INTERNET SERVICES

R·E·P
COMMERCIAL PRINTING
RELIABLE • EXPERIENCED • PROGRESSIVE

WEEU

Berks Country

READING EAGLE BUSINESS WEEKLY

Berks
GameDay

BIGdeals

Pretzel City
PRODUCTIONS

Reading Eagle Company

345 Penn Street . Reading . PA . 19603 . 610.371.5000

Contact us | Archives | Subscribe | Privacy policy | Advertise with us

©2013-2014 Reading Eagle Company, All Rights Reserved - These links are not endorsements of any products or services in such sites , and no information in such site has been endorsed or approved by this site.